Marriage in Islaam is a safe haven. A good example of this definition comes from Prophet Muhammed's marriage with Khadija. She comforted him and reassured him that he wasn't going crazy and that he had in fact been chosen by God to carry out his world mission. How should we prepare ourselves to live as a couple, as a family? Preparing yourselves to engage in this life experience of marriage, known as the "marriage" endeavor. It should not be idealized. The perfect husband or the perfect wife only exists in your dreams. God has given you, as a human being, intelligence, faults and deficiencies. Perfection is not given to you or any human being. Today, more than ever, living as a married couple is a challenge. Men and women meet and leave each other in a modern society in which they confuse freedom and the absence of a wife. Living as a couple is not without its challenges - preparing yourself, learning and constantly trying to reach out to the other wife. Remember each day that the person with whom you share your life comes with his or her own history, wounds, sensitivities and needs. You must understand, to observe, to accompany. Living as a couple is the greatest of tests: a test of patience, of attention, of the ability to control, of mending one's faults, of healing the wounds. In each of these tests, there are two parties. It isn't easy. Are you up to
